

Stop selling call scoring.

Build the agency a brain.

A persistent, machine-readable brain that gets smarter every month from their own calls, that leadership can talk to in plain language wherever they already work, and that they own outright even if they leave.

01 THE CORE LOOP

this is the moat · everything else is surface area

Score → coach → re-score the same human → measure what stuck.

🔄 Every cycle makes the coaching better, because it's the same humans being measured.

NOBODY ELSE CAN RUN THIS LOOP
A sales training company has the coaching no measurement of whether it landed	A call analytics vendor has the measurement no coaching arm	You need both ends pointed at the same humans over enough time for a trend to exist

02 THE OWNERSHIP MODEL

the offer's sharpest edge

OWNED BY THE AGENCY theirs permanently · exportable as files any time	RENTED FROM US the machine that makes the asset grow
– The corpus — every scored call – Verdicts, beat by beat – Tagged objections – Trend records per agent – Coaching prescriptions – The decision log	– The taxonomy and the rubric – The scoring engine – The training modules – Curation and maintenance – Surfaces, dashboards, custom apps – The trainer relationship
Not a software expense. Capital formation. Structured institutional memory no agency at their level has — readable by any AI, model-agnostic, portable, theirs.	Scope, not encoded loyalty. Monetize the execution , never the recommendation . The agent is allowed to be scoped — it is not allowed to lie.

Stop paying → you keep everything built so far. You just stop building more.

03

WHAT ACTUALLY CHANGED

A report is a snapshot. A corpus compounds.

OLD

We score your calls and give you reports. A service — priced against the cheapest transcription-plus-LLM vendor, skimmed Monday, forgotten Wednesday. The intelligence dies at delivery.

NEW

We build and maintain the agency's sales intelligence layer. The engine is an input. The report is one surface. The asset accumulates.

Snapshots are commodity.
Compounding assets grow their own switching costs.

04

THE METHOD — WHY IT WORKS

Master it to automatic. Then you get to be present.

Unit by unit → automaticity → presence → improvisation.

Djembe

A Guinean master, phrase by phrase, seven hours a day. Oral lineage.

Song circles

Hundreds led. Strangers singing a whole song they've never heard — built unit by unit, live.

Jazz

Loop the phrase until it's intuition. Only then can you converse.

“Until the script is subconscious, you have no right to improvise on the call.”

WHAT IT DISSOLVES

The script isn't the enemy of natural. It's the prerequisite for it.

05

WHAT COMPOUNDS

Month one is a better report. Month twelve is memory.

Month 1

Some scored calls. Modestly useful. Honestly — a slightly better report.

Month 3

Per-agent trajectories become visible. “Mike's price beat went from 40% to 70%.” Coaching now has evidence behind it.

Month 6

Decision history exists. “What changed after the rebuttal drill?” has a real answer, with a date attached.

Month 12

Institutional memory that outlives personnel. A new hire's ramp compared against the historical curve. Questions you couldn't have formulated in month one.

They can leave with all of it.
What they lose is the rate of accumulation.

06 SEQUENCE

narrow enough to clear fast · complete enough to run the loop

THIS WEEK	THEN	THEN	THEN, ONLY AS PULLED
Stand up the vault. Agent-side scored calls, the beat taxonomy, a decisions log. Nothing else.	Hand-build the first instance. One agency, read-only, two humans. Don't build the platform — build their vault.	Get leadership talking to it. Week three is the test. Unprompted queries mean it's real.	Slack agent → decision capture → drill app → trainer program → custom surfaces.

THE LINE TO HOLD

We build your agency a brain.

Not a scoring customer — the first vault. Different price, different buyer, different room. You're no longer selling a tool to an ops person; you're selling infrastructure to an owner.

THE GATE — NON-NEGOTIABLE

The conversational layer amplifies whatever the rubric produces. The vault is an amplifier. The rubric is still the signal. Amplifying a noisy signal makes things worse, not better.

The agreement number comes first.
